birth.
slow, probing curiosity.
a thousand things in a tiny grip holding what is real.
then, with age,
a distant longing
for other things not so near
and not so solid.
thus begins learning.
timid at first
then, growing more bold,
reaching out.

 anticipation of the beach . . . graduation . . . pomp and circumstances separation of the men and boys . . .
 "drink it fast, drink it straight,
 we were the class of '68
 and you haven't heard the last of us . . .

grasping those things
that were so far away,
only to find
they are yet farther.
that what was once so sure
is lost in a hundred shades of gray, grower ever more dim
and fleeting.
then,
a moment before,
a step away,
it is forever gone
in death.
